

Books that celebrate diversity

Justine Ball writes: In our recent primary RE networks, RE leaders have been discussing ways to consider the diversity of their RE teaching. As well as considering the imagery, selection of information and wording used to talk about religious education, leaders have also been sharing the books they use to support not just their approach to RE but their approach to the whole curriculum. One RE leader, Jess Hamilton, from Knightwood Primary School, has shared her list of books with you here.
